

NURSE PRACTITIONER SERVICE

OUR MODEL OF CARE

Hunter Primary Care's Nurse Practitioner service is person-centred and will work collaboratively with the resident, staff at your aged care home, General Practitioners, specialists and allied health providers to provide timely and holistic healthcare. Our nurse practitioners are in addition to the resident's current healthcare team, and not a replacement for any existing services.

Nurse Practitioner model designed for aged care

Consistent high quality clinical assessment by a person familiar with the resident's baseline health status and goals of care

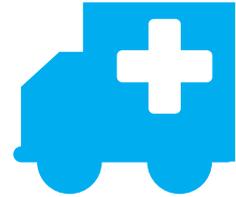

Regular outreach service to the aged care home to establish and develop an ongoing relationship with the resident

Contemporary knowledge of the aged care environment: legislation and clinical

Timely referrals to specialists and community based health professionals

Increase in access to primary care for residents could reduce hospital transfers

Medication review and management

Increase currency and documentation of Advance Care Plans

Communication with all involved in the resident's healthcare

Strong clinical governance structure to support the program

Documentation of each occasion of care

Hunter Primary Care has a long history of innovation and research in primary healthcare

I am very happy with the nurse practitioner who goes to (the aged care home) and do not wish to lose the Nurse Practitioner service. We are all feeling much more supported with (my mother's) healthcare. She is now reviewed regularly, and with a new diagnosis of bowel cancer, we have had at least one emergency department presentation avoided when (the nurse practitioner) organised treatment in an outpatients department. (The nurse practitioner) has also been able to adjust antihypertensive medication when her blood pressure began to lower – again, avoiding an emergency department presentation. This service is invaluable – IT NEEDS TO CONTINUE.
